Join the Virtual Wildlife Baby Shower and Support Orphaned Animals with San Diego Humane Society's Project Wildlife!

SAN DIEGO — With the onset of wildlife baby season, San Diego Humane Society's Project Wildlife program invites the community to participate in their 14th annual Wildlife Baby Shower. By purchasing special items from the organization's online baby registries, the public can help save the lives of baby squirrels, bunnies, raccoons, opossums, bobcats, hummingbirds, ducklings and more vulnerable wild animals. To learn more and contribute, visit sdhumane.org/babyshower.

Whether community members buy supplies from Amazon, Walmart or Target, or make a donation directly to San Diego Humane Society, every contribution counts. Your support will help the organization prepare for the diverse range of baby wildlife that will arrive in the coming weeks and months. Each heating pad, bag of formula and soft baby blanket purchased through the online registries will be sent directly to San Diego Humane Society.

"The Wildlife Baby Shower makes a huge difference for the tiniest, most vulnerable babies who come through our doors," said Jon Enyart, DVM, Senior Director of Project Wildlife at San Diego Humane Society. "As a nonprofit organization, we rely on the community's support so we can save and rehabilitate more than 320 animal species we share our beautiful landscape with here in the San Diego region."

San Diego Humane Society's Project Wildlife program is the primary resource for wild animal rehabilitation and conservation education in San Diego County. Each year, the organization gives more than 10,000 injured, orphaned and sick wild animals a second chance. At the Ramona Campus, SDHS specializes in caring for native apex predators and birds of prey, including hawks, owls, eagles, coyotes, bears, bobcats and, under special pilot authorization, mountain lions.
